

'The Museum of Everything' geopend in Rotterdamse Kunsthal meldt advertentie

Door Michael van Os op 5 maart 2016 om 09:30, in de categorie Evenementen.

Wordt geopend vandaag, het Museum of Everything in de Kunsthal Rotterdam, en duurt tot 22 mei 2016. De advertentie plukte ik uit de Volkskrant van gisteren (KLIK erop om te vergroten). Heb ik vanwege die dag vertraging die 'Waanzinnige opening' gemist? Hoop van niet. De tekst op de site is in het Engels en ik laat ik lekker onvertaald: "The Museum of Everything is the world's first and only wandering space for the untrained, unintentional, undiscovered and unclassified artists of modern times. Since 2009 The Museum of Everything has introduced contemporary audiences to alternative art-makers from the 19th, 20th and 21st centuries. Its acclaimed installations have welcomed over 750,000 visitors and its inclusive philosophies have inspired countless solo and group exhibitions, including the 55th Venice Biennale. The Kunsthal of Everything is the largest exhibition of non-academic artists ever staged in Holland. It includes masterworks by artists like Henry Darger, Guo Fengyi and Martín Ramírez, important Dutch authors like Willem van Genk, as well as lesser known accumulations by private art-makers from across Europe, America and beyond. Accompanying the artworks are easy-to-read essays by cultural luminaries who include David Byrne, Maurizio Cattelan, Marlene Dumas, Annette Messager, Grayson Perry, Ed Ruscha and many more."