While exiting Frieze, you might be handed this peculiar flyer here below:

This is because in partnership with Frieze Art Fair 2010, The Museum of Everything opened its doors on October 13th just a walk away from Frieze in Primrose Hill, London NW1. The Museum of Everything is now onto its Exhibiton #3 after its exciting Exhibiton #2 at the Tate Modern where 300 artists showed their works in the Turbine Hall. Exhibiton #3 continues the museum's commitment to bring the work of self-taught, unintentional and anonymous creator into the public eye. This year Sir Peter Blake the British pop artist is in collaboration with the Museum of everything, and his lifetime collection of discovered art and artefacts forms the basis of this very large art installation.

Walter Potter
Self-taught craftsman whose extraordinary Museum of Curiosities became widely known as an icon of Victorian whimsy.

Harry Vernon
Vaudeville entertainer Harry Vernon, whose hand-made puppets included a unique set of papier-mâché Punch & Judy dolls.

The Exhibition will be showing until December 2010, so even if the busstle of Frieze has made you tired of art-watching, the Museum of Everything definitely deserves a look-see in the next couple of months.
